TALL, BLOND AND HANDSOME

"HE'S simply terrific, Lana," Betty Hamilton said between breaths as she ran up to her girl-friend on the campus. "Simply wow!"

"Huh?" Lana's forehead wrinkled up in confusion. "Who's what?"

"I saw him in the hall this afternoon, between Math and Latin classes," Betty rambled on without even hearing what Lana had asked. "He's tall, blond and . . . and . . ." Betty searched her limited vocabulary for a special adjective, but couldn't find it, so she settled for, "gorgeous."

"Betty Hamilton, what on earth are you talking about?" Lana demanded, and she stopped walking to stare at her girl-friend. But Betty seemed oblivious to all earthly things. She was a million miles away . . . well, at least half way up the block, before she heard Lana's voice calling to her. She turned and saw Lana standing on the sidewalk, her arms akimbo, and her books scattered on the sidewalk.

"Lana, why are you standing there?" Betty asked innocently. "Aren't you coming home?" She ran to where Lana was and helped her pick up the books. "You should be more careful, Lana, you can ruin your books dropping them that way on the walk."

"I didn't drop them, Betty," Lana said, with her teeth clenched tight. "I threw them down."

"You threw them down?" Betty repeated the words, then added, "why?"

"Because you irk me at times, Miss Hamilton. You swoop down upon me out of nowhere, jibbering like a parrot, and when I ask you what you're talking about, you ignore me completely."

"I did that, Lana? When?"

"Today . . . yesterday . . . the day before . . . last year . . . always." Lana kept track of the times on her fingers as she spoke to Betty. "Now, before we move another step, please tell me what all that double-talk was about: 'He's tall . . . he's blond . . . he's gorgeous . . . he's terrific . . .'"

"Gee, he sounds wonderful. Who is he, Lana?"

"I DON'T KNOW! I'VE NEVER SEEN HIM!" Lana screamed.

"Then how do you know he's blond and that . . ."

"Wait a minute, Betty . . . wait just one minute, please," Lana held up her hand like a traffic policeman when he wants to halt a car. "Let's start right from the beginning. My name is Lana Green and . . ."

"Pleased to meet you, Lana," Betty extended her hand. "My name's Betty Hamilton and . . ."

"OH FOR SILLY'S SAKE, BETTY, STOP THAT!" Lana dropped her books again as she screamed.

Betty gathered them up and handed them to Lana without saying a word. She could see that Lana was in no mood for comment on the preservation of school books. Without another word they started to walk again. Lana looked straight ahead, her lips were pressed tight together and her brown eyes were dancing with fire.

The deep silence continued as they crossed Elm Street, State Street and Lincoln Avenue. Then as they turned down Butterview Lane, where Lana lived, Betty said. "He's terrific, Lana. Simply wow!"

"Oh-oh, here we go again," Lana raised her books ready to throw them down on the pavement.

"No, don't, Lana. I remember what I was talking about back there. It's the new student. He just moved into town. His name is Randy Carr and he's the handsomest boy in school."

"Oh, Betty, you say that about every boy," Lana told her. "I'm not interested in Randy Carr."

"I may have been wrong about all the others . . . but this time I'm sure that my eyes didn't deceive me."

Lana and Betty reached the picket fence surrounding Lana's home and the two girls talked for a while and then parted, with Betty promising Lana that she would point out Randy Carr to her tomorrow.

The following afternoon Betty and Lana were stationed at the same exact spot where Betty had been standing the day before when she had seen Randy Carr walking down the hall.

"Well, where's your handsome Romeo, Betty?" Lana asked impatiently. "If we stay here any longer we'll be late for our next class. I'm beginning to think that you've been seeing . . ."

"Sh-h-h," Betty hushed Lana. "Look . . . over there," she motioned with her head toward class room number 4550. "There he is now."

Lana looked down the hall and saw a white sweater approaching. It had a big block-letter 'A' on it. Those were the first two things that Lana no-

Put New FUN Into Your Life!

Play the Piano, Accordion, Guitar — Or ANY Instrument You Choose. Learn Faster, and for Less Cost, Than You Ever Thought Possible.

IMAGINE THE THRILL when someone at the party turns to you and says, "Please play for us!" Yes, when you can play music a whole new world opens up for you . . . of self-confidence . . . new friends . . . relaxation . . . popularity . . . making extra money . . . and the personal satisfaction that comes with being able to play any kind of music — any time you wish!

Best of all, there is a famous home-study course that will start you playing right away, beginning with delightful little pieces. And for far less cost than you think — without having to practice boring scales and tedious exercises!

How is all this possible?

The answer lies in the words of the renowned pianist, Ignace Jan Paderewski, "Music students actually teach themselves," he said. "A teacher can only show them what to do."

Using this principle, the U. S. School of Music successfully teaches through a fascinating home-study course. It shows you, how in simple, step-by-step pictured directions — and you teach yourself!

Anyone Can Learn to Play

You need no special "talent," no previous training. Yet you can quickly be playing music everybody loves — even if you don't know a single note now!

Your earliest lessons include lovely popular songs . . . waltzes . . . folk songs, etc. And (since you play from real notes) you'll soon be reaching for any kind of music! Latest hit songs . . . classics . . . hymns — anything you like, anything your friends ask you to play. What's more, others in your family can learn right along with you, if you wish. And the cost for everything (including valuable sheet music) is astonishingly small. Yes, only a matter of pennies for each lesson!

Get Started Now. Mail Coupon Today!

The thrill of playing music is waiting for you NOW! Get started by mailing the coupon for valuable Free Book which shows how easy and fascinating our course is. The book will be sent immediately. There is no obligation — and no salesman will call. Mail coupon at once!

THOUSANDS NOW PLAYING WHO NEVER THOUGHT THEY COULD!

"Enjoyed your piano Course, which could not be duplicated in quality or price from a teacher."
—Mrs. Jay Bartell, Massapequa, N.Y.

"I learned more in three months with you than in two years by myself. I have played for dances, and am now studying a couple of concertos."
—Ivan W. Dayley, Lisco, Nebr.

"Can't tell you how pleased I am . . . the lessons are very simple and clear; easy to understand."
—Mrs. H. Robertson, Fort Bragg, N.C.

"I recommend the U. S. School of Music, and am very glad for its help and cooperation."
—Albert Bippis, E. Greenville, Pa.

"Didn't know a sharp from a flat, but now play for friends, Sunday School, and Church."
—Miss D. McGee, DeValls Bluff, Ark.

FREE BOOK

This book SHOWS why our way to learn music is so EASY and quick. You'll see for yourself why over 1,000,000 people from all over the world — of all ages — in all walks of life — have turned to this course of making their dreams come true.

ticed. Then she looked up at the face of the young man coming toward them. Her lower jaw dropped and hung loosely as she stared at the sun-tanned figure. Her eyes combed his honey-colored hair and swam in the blue waters of his eyes. And just as she was warming in the glow of his friendly smile, she heard a voice asking: "Would you please direct me to the gym? I'm new here and don't know my way around very well."

Betty poked Lana in the ribs with her elbow and snapped her out of her day-dream. "I have to go to class," Betty said as she gave Lana a gentle kick in the shins as a signal. "But my girlfriend Lana is going toward the gym. I'm sure she'll be glad to show you where it is. Wouldn't you, Lana?" Betty delivered another gentle blow to Lana's leg.

"Betty, quit poking..." she stopped suddenly, realizing why Betty was jabbing her. "Oh, yes ...I'm going that way. 'Bye, Betty, see you later."

Lana and the new student knew quite a bit about each other by the time that they reached the gym. Lana took him past the place seven times, but Randy didn't seem to mind. They talked about the things they both liked and disliked, about sports, about studies... and of course the conversation got around to dates. Lana invited Randy to her home on Saturday to meet her mother and father. Lana always did that with her new dates. That way she got the approval or disapproval of a boy from her mother and father. They were busy talking about favorite records when the bell rang. Randy said goodbye and hurried off toward the gym.

Lana was all excited that evening as she helped her mother set the plates for dinner. "Oh, he's so different, mother. He's so...so mature, so manly... and very handsome. Oh, I do hope you and dad like him."

"If he's anything like you say he is, Lana, I'm sure we will," her mother assured her.

"He's new here and . . ." Lana's words were cut off by the soft chimes of the front door. "Oh, mother, that must be Randy now, I'll get it."

It was Randy, and he looked even more handsome and mature to Lana in his pin-striped suit. She introduced him, proudly, to her mother and father and then they sat down to dinner.

Lana could see that Randy was making a big hit with the folks and she was pleased. After dinner they all went into the living room and sat down. Lana's father asked a few questions of Randy and Lana could almost feel the third-degree coming on. She crossed her fingers and wished hard that Randy would pass the test.

Lana's mother called her into the kitchen to help with the dishes and Lana went reluctantly. She hated to leave Randy alone with her father. But her dad assured her that he and Randy would get along fine.

After the dishes got done the family and Randy sat around the television until almost eleven. Lana's father gave the long, hinting yawn and said something about it being time for all good people to be asleep.

Lana walked Randy to the door and they talked for a few minutes. She asked if she'd see him again, but Randy shook his head and said: "We better not, Lana. You're a wonderful girl . . . but I can't see you again. I shouldn't have come tonight... and I wouldn't have if I had known that... that..." Randy faltered and opened the door. "Better let your father tell you, Lana. Good-night, and thanks for asking me to dinner and to meet your mother and dad. They're great." Randy walked out and closed the door.

Lana was puzzled and when she walked into the living room her father looked at her and smiled sympathetically. "Did he tell you, Lana?" her father asked.

"He told me that he wouldn't see me again," Lana said. "But he wouldn't explain. He said that you would tell me, Dad."

"Randy Carr is a married man, Lana," her father said softly.

"Randy... married?"

"Yes, he told me that he was a veteran. Fought in Korea," her father explained. "He's going to finish college here under the G.I. Bill of Rights. His wife is in California and is going to join him next month."

"But... but why did he..."

"He came here not as a date with you, Lana. He's a stranger and he wanted to meet some people, some families, like your mother, me and you. He didn't know you had a crush on him until I hinted at it."

Lana sat down on the hassock and sighed.

"He's a fine lad, Lana. And when his wife gets here we'll invite them over for dinner, okay?"

Lana looked up at her dad and smiled, her eyes sparkling with a mist of tears. "Okay, dad."
